1. The walls of Hunneman Hall (located on the second floor)
 - Hunneman Hall's walls consist of approximately 92 linear feet of linen-covered panels.
 - The total number of pieces this space can accommodate varies depending on the size of each piece, but is generally between 25 to 30 pieces.
 - This space can be easily divided into five areas for a five-person show.
 - Two spaces located between the windows at the front of the building to the doors on either side of the room (16 feet)
 - Two spaces located between the doors on either side of the room and the front of the room (20 feet)
 - One space behind the stage, across the front of the room (28 feet)
 - Framed work may be displayed using the provided hanging rod system.
 - Rods hang from the molding around the room.
 - A hook, when released, slides freely up and down each rod to adjust height. When locked, the hook is held securely in place by the weight of the artwork hung over it. Each rod is approximately five feet in length.
 - Matted work may be displayed using t-pins (provided by the Library) that attach to wall panels.
 - Hunneman Hall is generally open to the public unless a program/meeting is in progress.
 - This space is not monitored by the Library.
